Secretary Lansing's "verge of war" is a repeater.

On being assigned to a room on the 'steenth floor of a city hotel, send in a hurry call for extra sheets for a fire-escape.

Just for consolation, let us say that winter would not be winter without the visits of the big Jack Frost and all the little Frosts.

About $100,000,000 of "pork" has been sent to the congressional scrap-heap. The country needs the money for making a start toward national defense.

Several potential regiments of Teutons in and about New York City have applied for American citizenship papers since the German submarine decree was made. There is no question where and for what they will fight.

Meanwhile Italy is conserving her energies in an ultra-prudent manner. By the time the snow gets out of the foothills, the Italian army ought to be ready to do things to the Austrians in the neighborhood of Gorizia.

No doubt a feeling of thankfulness will come over the nation which attacks us, to be informed by the newspapers that a steel net is to be nightly dropped across the water approaches to New York so as to prevent the passing of hostile submarines. Also it is splendid strategy to tell the enemy just what you are going to do!

It smacks somewhat of irony that the impotent Chinese nation is one of the most outspoken advocates of the policy adopted by the United States with reference to Germany's proposed submarine frightfulness. If it should ever come to the point of backing up the position taken, China would not be a very dependable ally.

Evidently the press agent is not doing his work thoroughly enough, for now comes the embazoned announcement that Geraldine Farrar, the opera singer, is a pro-German and that she even won't leave her seat when the "Star Spangled Banner" is played by the orchestra. If Geraldine only knew it, nobody is particularly worried about her lack of patriotism. They simply pity her. (Thus do we rise to the publicity agent's bait.)

It is probable that the decreased toll of merchant ships entering the blockaded waters about Great Britain is due in part to the fact that the more timid ship owners are keeping their vessels in port until the British defense against the submarine is perfected. It is possible, too, that the British defense already has become quite effective and that submarines are being caught. The wonder is that the British government will not tell about it if the latter is the case.

Two cases of poliomyelitis reported in Vermont during the month of January indicate that the disease is not exclusively a hot weather ailment. It is probable that the carrier of the disease is less active in winter than in the summer months—whatever that carrier may be—thus explaining the comparatively small number of cases in the winter. It has been contended by some that dust furnishes a favorable vehicle for the scattering of the disease germs; and the absence of dust in the winter bears out the contention in part at least.

Von Hindenburg has dropped out of the limelight, so far as the world outside of the central powers is permitted to know; yet it should not be taken for granted that the Kaiser's right bower is idle by any means. He probably is getting ready to meet the threatened offensives on at least three fronts, as well as preparing several offensive operations of his own. Von Hindenburg is better known as a smasher rather than as an object capable of receiving punishment; so his operations as head of the Kaiser's land forces next spring will be watched with interest.

Switzerland's protest to Germany over the latter's submarine policy is made with all the conviction that Switzerland might have had if she was possessed of a merchant marine. In fact, Switzerland's pronouncement is all the more convincing because of the fact that she has no merchant marine in danger from German submarines. Switzerland is, therefore, speaking from the standpoint of a real neutral and in behalf of civilization, as well as international law. The course adopted by the little republic and such a near neighbor ought to appeal with especial force to the authorities in Berlin.

The late Dr. Henry D. Holton of Brattleboro was an earnest worker in the particular field of endeavor to which he was called early in life, and his earnestness was nowhere more evident than when he was serving on the state board of health as executive officer. Dr. Holton's faith in the value of the public health service of the state led him to go to the limit of the law's specifications oftentimes, and consequently he now and then was criticized for strict observance of the letter of the regulations. However, even those who disagreed with Dr. Holton generally admitted that his diligence in the work was due to earnest desire to do the best as it appeared to him.

THE SMUGGLERS' NOTCH ROAD.

A state road through Smugglers' Notch will prove to be one of the most valuable assets Vermont can have to attract summer visitors, and it will be money well spent to appropriate $30,000 for the work of road construction. If there is desire for proof of the desirability of expending money in this manner, let the people of Vermont take a trip to Dixville Notch in northern New Hampshire and see what wonderful transformation has been made there by reason of permanent road construction. A few years ago the road through Dixville Notch was little better than a quagmire at certain periods of the year and traffic was practically at a standstill at those times. Now a fine, smooth highway leads through the whole region from the Notch to Errol, and thence southward to Berlin and the White Mountain region, the result being that there is a constantly increasing volume of tourist traffic through the northern section of New Hampshire. It will prove to be the same if Vermont lays out enough money to build a good permanent road through Smuggler's Notch.

CURRENT COMMENT

The Lincoln of To-day.

Twenty years ago there came from the press a little volume containing such Lincoln eulogies as the essays by James Russell Lowell and Carl Schurz; the editor made this statement in its preface: "It is still too early to know Abraham Lincoln." * * * We are likely for years to come to have an increasing volume of testimony concerning him. * * * Meanwhile there is slowly taking form in the general apprehension of men a figure so notable, so individual, so powerful, that men are everywhere recognizing * * * that he holds the interest, the profound respect, and the affection of the people as none other has yet done."

Miss Ida M. Tarbell, writer of one of the most popular Lincoln biographies, and for years a patient student of his career, in an article published in The Herald yesterday, declares that as a vast quantity of new material continues to appear "one splendid fact outranks all others," that "our new knowledge leaves us the Lincoln we had 20 years ago," that "the man revealed to the world by the tragedy of April, 1865, has not been materially changed by 50 years of study." Every American, every believer in democracy, the world over, will rejoice that this is true. Few great men stand so splendidly the test of time. The Lincoln letters and documents, a few of which are exhumed almost every year; the diaries, speeches and personal narratives of his fellow statesmen, both North and South, that appear from time to time; the anecdotes that soldiers and citizens continually are giving to the public—and not a few of them are inventions and exaggerations—enlarge our knowledge of the emancipator, but they do not change our estimate of his work and character. Lincoln stands to-day before the world as a towering giant, awkward if you will, but dignified, familiar but austere—qualities admirably suggested by the new statue by George Grey Barnard—as the exponent of democracy, not only for one nation, but for all nations. "Our needs, our conditions, are different," said Rich and Watson Gilder, "but the principles of justice and of human liberty are the same, now and forever. In the recurring and necessary readjustments of laws and methods in the related realms of industry, of economics, and of government, his respect for rights, acknowledgment of mutual duties, striving for justice, understanding of humanity, and love of fellowmen make Lincoln's leadership of standard of a patriotism broader than the confines of commonwealth.—Boston Herald.

Germany's New Trap.

We profoundly distrust any advance of the German imperial government proposing that the American government should support measures of safety for American ships in the atrocity zone. In the first place it proposes an impossibility: no system could be devised which would permit at the same time the prosecution of the German campaign of frightfulness and the immunization of our vessels. In the second place, the acceptance by us of any special safeguards for our benefit would be a base and cowardly abandonment of the principle of neutral rights, of the general claim to humane restraints, which are at once the justification and the foundation of our protest and our severance of diplomatic intercourse.

Finally, Germany asks us or pretends to ask us—for the overtone is palpably insincere—to suggest a solution of the situation, when the duty and the power of solving it lie alike with her. Why should we offer any new program when Germany can sweep the whole difficulty away by merely obeying the well-established and heretofore universally recognized laws of maritime warfare? Like the false-hearted "peace" move of Dec. 12, the present specious overture is designed to place the United States in a false position. Its purpose is to trap us into assuming a responsibility in premises where none naturally belongs to us—to relieve Germany of the sense of the hidden crimes which she has announced and which she is committing. In a secondary sense, the move is planned to secure delay as respects any real activity on our part. The hope is that we shall be entangled in a new procedure of note writing, this time through the slow medium of a third foreign office, so that long-drawn-out negotiations may postpone war while U-boats continue to strew the seas with the dead and the wreckage of neutral ships. No possible good can come from this new and essentially insolent as well as deceitful act of diplomatic jugglery. The only notice the American government should take of it is to record such courteous acknowledgment of its receipt as may be due the Swiss government by intermediary. No formal reply need be made, even in the form of rejection. Germany knows perfectly well how the safety of neutral ships and citizens may be avoided for, and we know she knows it. This is all that is necessary.—New York Evening Sun.

PUNISHING FOOD WASTE.

Five Years for Setting Fire to $400 Worth of Barley.

London, Feb. 13.—So many precautions have been taken by the government to conserve its food supply that persons caught wasting food are severely dealt with. A striking example of the severe punishment meted out to careless persons was recently given when a sailor was sent to prison for five years for setting fire to a quantity of barley worth $400. "This is not the first time," said the court in passing sentence, "when we can stand the loss of stocks of food."

Sick-Headache!

Dr. J. J. Caldwell says that this exceedingly distressing disease does not shorten life, but does not appear to be curable. Sufferers from this affliction are condemned to undergo the periodical attacks every few weeks until they are forty years of age, after which the attacks are less frequent, and finally disappear entirely. Palliative measures during the attack are all that it is possible to suggest, while care in the diet is the best preventive measure. An attack may often be prevented by taking two anti-kammita tablets when the first symptoms appear, and one anti-kammita tablet every two hours during the attack shortens it, eases the pain and brings rest and quiet. Anti-kammita tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They quickly relieve all pain.

TO PLANT POTATOES

In Unused Land Lying Next to the Fortifications of Paris.

Paris, Feb. 13.—A band of territory about 150 yards wide and 18 miles long skirting the fortifications of Paris, and now uncultivated will probably be planted to potatoes next spring. The mayors of the 20 arrondissements, or wards, of Paris have arranged to meet and settle the details.

This land still belongs to the nation, but the city of Paris will eventually come into possession of it when the fortifications are demolished, in pursuance of an arrangement with the government. It will then be transformed into parks, boulevards, public playgrounds and sites for public institutions. In the meantime the cultivation of it will in no wise interfere with the plans for the future.

If the coming season is at all favorable to the crop, France will have a record yield of potatoes. The movement for the planting of all uncultivated land to either potatoes or Jerusalem artichokes has become general and official. A government commission is getting ready to furnish seed and fertilizers to all who want to help swell the crop.

TO AVOID GOING TO WAR.

French Ingenuity Shown in Various Ways, But Generally Fails.

Paris, Feb. 13.—Tricks to avoid military duty have been varied rather than numerous during the war. The most recent stratagem is that of two shirkers, unknown to each other, who hid in woods to escape service. One of them, a man named Souleillon, 32 years old, remained concealed from the beginning of hostilities in order to avoid the mobilization order. His father dying, Souleillon came out of hiding to lay claim to his parent's estate. An alert gendarme at Cahors took him into custody, reminding him that, before being an heir, he had to be a soldier.

The second case was that of Alfred Rous, who took refuge in the forest of Raynaldes. Here he built himself a comfortable cabin with stones, branches and tiles. Behind his lodging place he installed an oven to bake bread. Possessing a rifle, two pistols and much ammunition, Rous hunted and caught fish. Recently, a young shepherd, seeking a strayed sheep, surprised Rous who was asleep (gendarmes were called and after a short fight the deserter was found and arrested).
